AgroSpectrum Envisaging Future | Updating Present ASIA

Thailand to establish 3 learning centers, agricultural tourism sites, and agricultural product sales points in 2024

03 January 2024 | News

Aims to build resilient agriculture ecosystem

Aims to build resilient agriculture ecosystem

Pramote Yajai, Director-General of the Department of Land Development, revealed that the Department of Land Development Together with agencies under the Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives.

Department is organizing 3 big activities under the project "Sending a happy new year given to farmers Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives for the year 2024â?• consists of

1. Giving gifts to Thai farmers to have food to eat, use, and have sufficient income

2. Increase happiness in the new year. Travel around Thailand Be happy with the Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives

3. Enhance your energy in the new year. Selling products at special prices Quality agricultural products during this New Year festival Department of Land Development Has opened a center to welcome tourists to visit agricultural tourist attractions and various agricultural learning centers, providing free admission.

There is also a soil analysis service launched with better access to the farmers. This will allow farmers to improve soil before planting crops and using fertilizers effectively by making them aware of the importance of soil analysis. Farmers can request simple soil testing services by volunteer soil doctors across the country with Soil Test Kits through the Soil Test Soil Testing application. Results can be obtained quickly within 1 day or through a thorough soil examination at 13 laboratories across the country.

The Land Development Department is ready to serve every province across the country during the New Year festival until January 31, 2024.