Ivanti, the tech company has achieved the ISO 14001 certification, for its highest standards for environmental management systems (EMS) systems.

The internationally recognized standard for EMS provides a framework for organizations to continually improve their environmental performance. By adhering to this standard, Ivanti ensures they are taking proactive measures to minimize their environmental footprint, comply with relevant legal requirements and achieve their environmental objectives.

Additionally, in honor of Earth Day, Ivanti is launching a global tree-planting initiative. With the help of Ecologi, Ivanti has pledged to plant 2,723 trees – one for each employee. This initiative not only contributes to reforestation efforts but also underpins Ivanti's broader mission towards fostering environmental stewardship. Beyond this initiative, Ivanti has embarked on several other eco-conscious improvements within the organization, notably eliminating the use of single use cups across many of its offices in favor of durable ceramic alternatives.

Ivanti plans to leverage the insights gained from its comprehensive greenhouse gas footprint assessment to implement targeted strategies aimed at reducing its environmental impact. This includes striving for an improved EcoVadis score, reinforcing its dedication to continuous environmental improvement.
